The adoption of the agenda was considered. Chairman Pro Tem Lund moved to amend the agenda and to move the agenda item, Appearances Not Listed on the Agenda, before the item concerning the Fire Prevention Code. City Clerk Gabel asked the Awarding of the Nancy Anderson Scholarship be delayed until a future City Council meeting. Yes: Jacobs, Lund, Watts, Allen, Johnston. No: none.

Mayor Johnston read a Proclamation Recognizing Fire Prevention Week October 7-October 13, 2018, to members of the Fire Department.

Mayor Johnston said the next agenda item is concerning the Fire Prevention Code and is for those who would like to speak concerning this proposed ordinance. She said the City would like to request those speaking to please limit their comments to three minutes.

Gary Grigsby, Judge Advocate from Matthews-Crawford Post 131 of the American Legion said he works with legal matters, and he would like to introduce their Vice-President Larry Province. Grigsby said the President is currently out of the state. Province said he has worked with the City's Fire Department personnel for a number of years, and he has a great deal of respect for them and their work. He said the Matthews-Crawford Post has hired a consulting firm, and Justin Burton is here tonight to speak.

Burton explained he works for Fire Protection & Consultants, and said they are a consulting firm from Kansas City. He said his company works with other cities throughout the United States and other countries. Burton said they work with other cities concerning codes and the adoption of those codes. He said he is representing some of the businesses affected by the proposed code changes. Burton said these businesses have more than 300 occupants where alcohol is consumed in a group A-2 and would be required to have sprinkler systems installed. He stressed he is a strong supporter of sprinkler systems, that his company design's sprinkler systems. Burton said it is their opinion that other systems can be used and maintained in buildings that could provide a better level of safety than sprinkler systems. Burton described several examples of other ways safety can be provided other than sprinkler systems.

Burton said the 300-occupancy level is a "knee jerk" reaction to what happened on 9-1-1 concerning high rise buildings and assembly occupancy because of the Rhode Island nightclub fire in 2003 that killed many people. Burton said the nightclub fire casualties occurred because the doors were chained shut and the building had low ceilings, and foam insulation was ignited by interior pyrotechnics. He said fire inspections are very important.

Province said he wants everyone to know they support safety and the American Legion might be able to survive these costs, but other businesses may not. He said the cost for the American Legion would be $140,000 and other businesses are even more expensive.

Warrensburg resident Mike Bodenhamer said he has been in business over 40 years and Leo Kostas has been in business over 30 years. He said their businesses have invested time and money trying to supply entertainment in Warrensburg. Bodenhamer said in the past inspections have been passed, and now some businesses are required to invest a minimum of $140,000. He said businesses cannot be expected to pay this and survive.

Jon Arnold from the Elks Lodge #673 distributed and described the costs of the sprinkler systems. He said they received bids from Ozark Fire Sprinkler Company, Inc., which included a bid amount from JC Myers Construction. He said additionally there were costs associated with connecting water lines.

Fire Chief Jim Kushner said there has been a lot of discussion about this proposed ordinance. He said this has been recommended by the Code Committee and it is the City Council's decision on how they would like to proceed. Council member Jacobs said he had heard two of the six businesses are no longer required to install the sprinklers. Kushner said Heroes changed their seating arrangement, and The District is putting in a sprinkler system for the section they are remodeling. Kushner said he has spoken with Bodie's about possible changes for that business, and Bodenhamer said he prefers not making any changes.

Council member Watts said he believes a mechanism is needed to differentiate between a restaurant and a night club. Chairman Pro Tem Lund said this could be based on food sales on an annual basis. Allen said she believes those existing businesses should be grandfathered in. He asked if this included the vehicles purchased from the Highway Patrol, and Police Chief Rich Lockhart said it does not. Lockhart said that those purchases were from this year's budget. Lockhart said he has wanted to replace police vehicles when necessary, not on a cycle according to the length of time the vehicle has been driven or the mileage.
